Program Overview

As Bolashak students are a diverse group (undergraduate, master's and Ph.D.) in a variety of academic fields, American Councils is looking for information about the range of academic options available at your institution. We placed over 430 students in more than 85 host institutions in fall 2006, and we expect to place over 200 students in fall 2007. Priority areas of study for the Bolashak Program include:

- Technical fields such as computer science, engineering, and technology management;
- Social sciences such as economics, international affairs, and public administration;
- Natural sciences such as biology and chemistry;
- Health sciences such as public health;
- Professional degrees such as education administration and finance.

Your answers to the following questions will assist us in recommending suitable candidates for study at your institution.

1. What is the size of your institution (# Ugrad/Grad students, # faculty)? _____

2. What percentage of your student enrollment consists of international students? _____

3. What is the minimum/maximum number of Bolashak students your institution is willing to accommodate?

Minimum

(Ugrad/Grad): _____

Maximum

(Ugrad/Grad): _____

4. What is the last date that student applications could be submitted for fall 2007 admissions (Ugrad/Grad)? _____

5. Does your institution accept applications for spring admission? _____

6. Would your university offer conditional admittance (or non-degree status) to undergraduate or graduate students in fall 2007 should their standardized test scores fall below minimum university requirements? If yes, would the conditional admittance require ESL or remedial academic courses? _____

7. List the schools and colleges within your institution (business, engineering, etc.). _____

8. Judging from the priority areas of study for the Bolashak Program mentioned above, which departments or programs would you single out as especially suited to hosting Bolashak fellows? _____

9. What are the housing options for students (on-campus dormitories, apartments, or off-campus housing)? Please list the costs separately in the cost section below, if they differ. _____

10. Please list any dates during which time the university housing/dormitories are closed during the academic year (e.g. during holidays). Are housing options available for international students during the holidays? _____

Program Costs

Below please give the total cost of tuition, room & board, mandatory fees, and other expenses at your institution for the 2007-2008 academic year.

Host institutions should bill American Councils directly for tuition and fees and any room / board charges provided by the university. Students renting private apartments will be sent a stipend directly from us to pay for the apartment and food.

The Bolashak Program provides standard accident and sickness coverage for each fellow. If your institution normally requires sponsored students to purchase a specific health plan, American Councils requests that this requirement be waived. If your institution cannot waive the health insurance fee, please list the cost under "other fees."

Bolashak fellows will also receive a book stipend per session directly from American Councils. Please do not include book charges in the cost estimates below.

Please indicate any discounts your institution is able to give in the cost-share column below. If the level of discounts or cost-share depends on the number of students, please explain here:
